John was homeless and unemployed. He was in and out of shelters and sometimes slept outside on a park bench. John wasn't taking his medications. He didn't want to carry around bottles of medication and was afraid that someone would steal them while he was living at the shelter. Shortly after staying at the shelter, John was hospitalized. Upon discharge from the hospital, he began receiving on-site respite services from The Edinburg Center's Intensive Community Support (ICS) Program.
